"I help clients by ensuring they are informed at every checkpoint of litigation and have a clear understanding of what to expect."

Aiden is a civil litigator who is passionate about helping Maryland businesses and consumers navigate complex contract disputes. She takes pride in representing contractors and subcontractors who are owed money, ensuring they can get back to what they do best. She also brings a thoughtful and strategic approach to defending premises operators in personal injury claims.

Aiden believes in pursuing the most efficient and effective resolution for clients. While she is skilled at finding middle ground to resolve disputes quickly and without undue expense, she is always prepared to vigorously advocate for her clients when demanded by the circumstances. Her experience in helping to settle complex, high-stakes cases coupled with a track record of judgments secured for her clients is a testament to this balanced and strategic approach.

A lifelong Marylander, Aiden attended the University of Maryland in College Park for undergrad, the University of Baltimore School of Law for her J.D., and is proud to have worked in all three branches of Maryland State Government. She is admitted to practice across the State and will soon aid clients in federal matters. Before joining the firm, Aiden clerked for the Honorable Mark W. Crooks in Anne Arundel County Circuit Court. When not in the office, she can be found spending time with her husband, son, and two dogs around Annapolis or unwinding by watching superfan episodes of The Office.
