"Risk and economic analysis are often the most important issues for clients to consider. Many times clients allow the emotional nature of a dispute to control their decision making."

As a skilled advocate and aggressive negotiator, Brent is lead counsel in some of the most complex cases the firm handles. He has a broad range of experience and is able to handle almost any business legal issue. Whether it is resolving shareholder disputes or a business dissolution, handling commercial collections matters or contract disputes, he is well-equipped to advise clients and help them achieve their objectives.

With a steady and confident approach, Brent handles all types of litigation ranging from small-claims to multi-million dollar disputes. Brent practices regularly in the State and Federal courts in Maryland and the District of Columbia.

Born and raised in Prince George's County, Brent enjoys basketball, running and all things competitive. Growing up the son of a prominent local judge, it was only natural for Brent to follow in his father's footsteps by becoming an attorney.
